"I am unpersuaded by the view that the prime rules of scientific method should differ between 'hard science' and the social sciences. Science is science."

—Stephen Van Evera, Guide to Methods

Overview: This course is designed to introduce students to the concepts and mechanics of political science research. The process of scientific political research will be the starting point for the course, which will then proceed to an understanding of gathering and testing data using basic statistical methods.

The course begins with consideration of what makes political science a "science". What logic must we follow to engage in scientific consideration of political phenomenon? That is, how is research conducted, how is it designed, what is the process by which we engage in the study of political phenomenon?

The course moves on to consider approaches to quantitative research. The topics in this section are based on understanding the gathering of data and design of research tests. What are the fundamental concepts required to understand quantitative methods in political science? How are samples collected? What is the difference between a sample and population? How are tests designed to make the best use of the sample data?

The next section of the course focuses on statistical concepts in the quantitative research process. Included in this section is understanding the use of descriptive statistics, and nonparametric measures of statistical relationship. Students will become familiar with use of excel and SPSS for statistical analysis and with the proper methods of reporting research results using tables, charts, and graphs.

This course is primarily focused on quantitative methods of political analysis. Time permitting qualitative methods will also be discussed. Quantitative analysis requires the development of an understanding for use of statistics to analyze the relationship between variables. Using statistics does mean using mathematical formulas. However, none of the formulas for this course exceed what a person could reasonably be expected to have learned in a basic college algebra class.

Science Research Daniel Beland, Robert Henry Cox, 2010-12-10 Writing about ideas John Maynard Keynes noted that they are more powerful than is commonly understood Indeed the world is ruled by little else One would expect therefore that political science a discipline that focuses specifically on the nature of power would have a healthy respect for the role of ideas However for a variety of reasons not least of which is the influence of rational choice theory which presumes that individuals are self maximizing rational actors this is not the case and the literature on the topic is fairly thin As the stellar cast of contributors to this volume show ideas are in fact powerful shapers of political and social life In Ideas and Politics in Social Science Research Daniel B land and Robert Henry Cox have gathered leading scholars from a variety of subdisciplines in political science and sociology to provide a general overview of the theoretical empirical and methodological issues raised by social science research on ideas and politics Throughout they hone in on three central questions What is the theoretical basis for studying ideas in politics What are the best methods What sort of empirical puzzles can be solved by examining ideas and related phenomena such as discourse policy paradigms and framing processes In sum this is a state of the art academic work on both the role of ideas in politics and the analytical utility that derives from studying them Scalable and Efficient Probabilistic Topic Model Inference for Textual Data Måns Magnusson, 2018-04-27 Probabilistic topic models have proven to be an extremely versatile class of mixed membership models for discovering the thematic structure of text collections There are many possible applications covering a broad range of areas of study technology natural science social science and the humanities In this thesis a new efficient parallel Markov Chain Monte Carlo inference algorithm is proposed for Bayesian inference in large topic models The proposed methods scale well with the corpus size and can be used for other probabilistic topic models and other natural language processing applications The proposed methods are fast efficient scalable and will converge to the true posterior distribution In addition in this thesis a supervised topic model for high dimensional text classification is also proposed with emphasis on interpretable document prediction using the horseshoe
