New Directions in Assessing Historical Thinking Kadriye Ercikan, Peter Seixas, 2015-02-20 New technologies have radically transformed our relationship to information in general and to little bits of information in particular. The assessment of history learning which for a century has valued those little bits as the centerpiece of its practice now faces not only an unprecedented glut but a disconnect with what is valued in history education. More complex processes historical thinking historical consciousness or historical sense making demand more complex assessments. At the same time advances in scholarship on assessment open up new possibilities. For this volume Kadriye Ercikan and Peter Seixas have assembled an international array of experts who have collectively moved the fields of history education and assessment forward. Their various approaches negotiate the sometimes conflicting demands of theoretical sophistication empirically demonstrated validity and practical efficiency. Key issues include articulating the cognitive goals of history education the relationship between content and procedural knowledge the impact of students language literacy on history assessments and methods of validation in both large scale and classroom assessments. New Directions in Assessing Historical Thinking is a critical research oriented resource that will advance the conceptualization design and validation of the next generation of history assessments.

Building Better Citizens Holly Korbey, 2019-10-21 Educating for citizenship was the original mission of American schools but for decades that knowledge also known as civics education has been in decline as schools have shifted focus to college and career STEM and raising reading and math scores. But over the last few years spurred on by political polarization and a steep decline in public understanding civics education is seeing a nation wide resurgence as school leaders educators and parents recognize the urgency of teaching young people how America works especially young people who have been marginalized from the political system. But this isn't your grandmother's civics. The new civics has been updated and re
