

After the Civil War, the United States entered the era known today as the Second Industrial Revolution. (Union (N) v Confederate (S)) the social, political, and economic causes and consequences of the Second Industrial Revolution - Agricultural = Farm production increased as new farm technology developed. Fewer farmers were needed to produce enough food for the country's population. The U.S. economy shifted from an agricultural-based economy to an industrial-based economy. Business/political = small number of business owners began to control specific industries, such as the railroads. Labor unions became more organized as workers began to fight for equality and fairness. Social = People moved to the United States in large numbers to work in industries. New social classes, upper, middle, and lower, developed in cities. Cities began to grow up and out with more than half of the population living in urban areas. Living conditions in cities deteriorated as populations increased and sanitation and inadequate housing issues emerged. Technology = An abundance of steel helped launch the construction of heavy machinery and railroads. Development of a process to refine oil improved transportation and machine operation. Advancements in communication, such as the telephone and telegraph, united the country.

similarities and differences between the First and Second Industrial Revolutions - The need for workers in the 1st revolution led people to move from farming areas to urban settings. It also brought women and children into the labor force. Second revolution brought factory-produced machines such as threshers and seed drills which meant that even fewer farm workers were needed. Americans from rural areas continued to move to cities. In addition, immigrants arrived in major cities in waves. The number of factory workers increased sharply. By the end of the 19th century, the United States had become a manufacturing economy. Both the first and second industrial revolution affected technology, transportation and other things.

economic challenges to farmers and farmers responses to those challenges in the mid to late 1800s -

Farmers lost property due to the price of crops dropping. Oliver Hudson Kelley also witnessed the poverty and suffering of farmers brought on by their loss of livelihood. Kelley and other members of the Department decided to form an educational organization called the Order of Farmers of Prosperity. The order became known as the National Grange. Its purpose was to help the nation's farmers.

Social Gospel Movement - (the office responded in the late 1800s, the public grew increasingly aware of the problems that accompanied urbanization.) What is social movement in which Christians were urged to improve social conditions for those less fortunate. What was 1800-early 20th centuries. What is early leader was Reverend Washington Gladden - Significance - This social gospel movement helped immigrants and people moving from rural areas to the cities. Leaders of the movement created social service groups such as settlement houses and the YMCA and YWCA. The Social Gospel movement was based on the belief that the gap between the rich and the poor was too great in American society. This movement encouraged the wealthy and the upper middle class to help less fortunate people. At that time, there were no government programs to help people in poverty. The social gospel concept also brought the concept of social reform. The government set about the new reforms to fight for themselves or to depend on charity. This lack of government help created the need for the Social Gospel movement, according to its supporters.

changes that occurred as the United States shifted from an agrarian to an industrial society - Railroads and grain operators were able to charge such high rates because they were monopolies. A monopoly exists when one company or group of companies controls most or all of the business in an industry. Railroads were monopolies because just one railroad company could control thousands of miles of track. In addition, many railroad companies also owned the grain elevators.
