Urban African American:

African American Urban Experience Earl Lewis, Tera W. Hunter, 2004 River Jordan Joe William Trotter, 1998-03-19

Since the nineteenth century the Ohio River has represented a great divide for African Americans. It provided a passage to freedom along the underground railroad and during the industrial age it was a boundary between the Jim Crow South and the urban North. The Ohio became known as the River Jordan, symbolizing the path to the promised land. In the urban centers of Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville, and Evansville, blacks faced racial hostility from outside their immediate neighborhoods as well as class color and cultural fragmentation among themselves. Yet despite these pressures, African Americans were able to create vibrant new communities as former agricultural workers transformed themselves into a new urban working class. Unlike most studies of black urban life, Trotter's work considers several cities and compares their economic conditions, demographic makeup, and political and cultural conditions. Beginning with the arrival of the first blacks in the Ohio Valley, Trotter traces the development of African American urban centers through the civil rights movement and the developments of recent years.

Manhood Development in Urban African-American Communities Robert J. Jagers, Roderick J. Watts, 2018-10-24

One of the first books to unite practice research and theory in addressing manhood development, Manhood Development in Urban African American Communities aids in the construction of more holistic and progressive notions of African American manhood. Proceeding from a psychological perspective, this text explores issues of culture and race as they impact on the cognitive, emotional, and behavioral characteristics of African American boys and men. You will see how the development of self-esteem and self-image in African American men are specifically affected by issues of gender, race, culture, religion, and oppression. You will see how the development of self-esteem and self-image in African American men are specifically affected by issues of gender, race, culture, religion. The understanding of culture, oppression, and gender you will gain from this book will enable you to promote the positive development of young men. Manhood Development in Urban African American Communities covers theories, research, and intervention programs aimed at better understanding and addressing the challenges young African American men face in urban areas. Psychologists, sociologists, social workers, and all others interested in research on youth development will be captivated by the book's explorations of the role of culture in the social development of African American youth, cluster profiles of racial socialization beliefs, giving special consideration to factors of spiritual, religious coping, extended family care, cultural pride reinforcement, and racial awareness, oppression, and sociopolitical development as a basis for interventions aimed at sociopolitical awareness and action. Findings from SQAQs (Student Questionnaire on Academic Performance, Cognitive Development, and Social Knowledge) completed by 100 participants of the RAAMUS (Responsible African American Men United in Spirit) Academy and their implications for future youth interventions, a multi-method study that explores the relationship between gender, spirituality, and spiritual well-being, and several indices of religiosity, including religious participation and religious motivation, a review of manhood, and womanhood development in traditional African societies and the connection with contemporary development The themes of gender oppression liberation and culture found throughout Manhood Development in Urban African American Communities provide a broad scope for the inclusion of a wide range of perspectives and disciplines ranging from the psychological to the political This broad perspective will bring to light the specific ways in which we need to change things to allow our young African American men living in urban areas to form healthy positive images of themselves as individuals and as part of a greater society in which they often face grave challenges Segregation, Poverty, and Mortality in Urban African Americans Anthony P. Polednak, 1997 This book brings together the results of several studies examining mortality rates for African Americans in selected U S urban areas in relation to both social class and the degree of black white residential segregation

African American Urban History since World War II Kenneth L. Kusmer, Joe W. Trotter, 2009-08-01 Historians have devoted surprisingly little attention to African American urban history of the postwar period especially compared with earlier decades Correcting this imbalance African American Urban History since World War II features an exciting mix of seasoned scholars and fresh new voices whose combined efforts provide the first comprehensive assessment of this important subject The first of this volume s five groundbreaking sections focuses on black migration and Latino immigration examining tensions and alliances that emerged between African Americans and other groups Exploring the challenges of residential segregation and deindustrialization later sections tackle such topics as the real estate industry s discriminatory practices the movement of middle class blacks to the suburbs and the influence of black urban activists on national employment and social welfare policies Another group of contributors examines these themes through the lens of gender chronicling deindustrialization s disproportionate impact on women and women s leading roles in movements for social change Concluding with a set of essays on black culture and consumption this volume fully realizes its goal of linking local transformations with the national and global processes that affect urban class and race relations The African American Urban Male's Journey to Success

School Counseling for Black Male Student Success in 21st Century Urban Schools Malik S. Henfield,Ahmad R. Washington,2015-11-01 Discussions and research related to the salience of Black male student needs and development in relation to their general success and well being is well documented in many fields Indeed many studies have found that healthy masculine identity development is associated with a number of positive outcomes for males in general including Black males In school counseling literature however this discussion has been relatively absent particularly regarding those students living in urban contexts Indeed research devoted to the study of Black males in the school counseling literature focuses almost exclusively on race and issues associated with its social construction with only cursory if any attention given to their masculine identity development as a function of living in urban communities and attending urban schools Based on this lack of information it is probably a safe assumption that intentional systematic culturally relevant efforts to assist Black males in developing healthy achievement and masculine identities based on their unique personal social academic experiences and future career goals are not being applied by school counselors concerned with meeting students needs

School counselors are in a unique position nonetheless to lend their considerable expertise insights training and skills to improving life outcomes among Black males a population who are consistently in positions of risk according to a number of quality of life indicators Without knowledge and awareness of Black males masculine identity development in urban areas coupled with the requisite skills to influence the myriad factors that enhance and impede healthy development in such environments they are missing out on tremendous opportunities which other professions appear to understand and quite frankly seem to take more seriously As such this book proposes to accomplish two specific goals 1 Highlight the plight of Black males with specific emphasis on the ecological components of their lives in relation to current school culture and trends 2 Encourage school counselors to give more thought to Black male identity development that takes into consideration differential experiences in society as a whole and schools in particular as a function of the intersection of their race as well as their gender The first rationale for this book then is to highlight the plight of Black males with specific emphasis on the ecological components of their lives in relation to current school culture and trends e g standards based accountability practices in urban environments However I recognize the role of school counselors has never been fully integrated into educational reform programs As such their positions are often unregulated and determined by people in positions of power who do not understand their training job specific standards and thus potential impact on the lives of Black male students As a result their vast potential to develop strong interventions designed to address the myriad racial and masculine factors that serve to enhance and impede Black males academic achievement is often unrealized Therefore the second reason for this special issue is to include the scholarship of professional school counselors and counselor educators with policy change in mind Scholars will be invited to contribute manuscripts that explore race masculinity and academic achievement in relation to the role of school counselors This is designed to encourage school counselors and counselor educators to give more thought to Black male identity development that takes into consideration differential experiences in society as a whole and schools in particular as a function of the intersection of their race as well as their gender
