Parts of a Plant

Flowers are the part of the plant that makes seeds.

Leaves are the parts of the plant where food is made by photosynthesis. Leaves take in carbon dioxide from the air, water from the soil and energy from the sun. They also store food.

Stems support the upper parts of the plants.

Roots anchor the plant in the soil. Water and minerals travel from the soil to the roots. They also store food.

Seeds have a tiny embryo of a plant inside them. The seed takes food which supplies energy for growth until the plant grows leaves.
