In the Wake of War Jeffrey M. Diefendorf, 1993-06-24 In 1945 Germany's cities lay in ruins destroyed by Allied bombers that left major architectural monuments badly damaged and much of the housing stock reduced to rubble At the war's end observers thought that it would take forty years to rebuild but by the late 1950s West Germany's cities had risen anew The housing crisis had been overcome and virtually all important monuments reconstructed and the cities had reclaimed their characteristic identities Everywhere there was a mixture of old and new historic churches and town halls stood alongside new housing and department stores ancient street layouts were crossed or encircled by wide arteries old city centers were balanced by garden suburbs laid out according to modern planning principles In this book Diefendorf examines the questions raised by this remarkable feat of urban reconstruction He explains who was primarily responsible what accounted for the speed of rebuilding and how priorities were set and decisions acted upon He argues that in such crucial areas as architectural style urban planning historic preservation and housing policy the Germans drew upon personnel ideas institutions and practical experiences from the Nazi and pre-Nazi periods Diefendorf shows how the rebuilding of West Germany's cities after 1945 can only be understood in terms of long-term continuities in urban development

A Dictionary of the English Language Samuel Johnson, 1818 A Dictionary of the English Language Johnson, 1818 Ruins and Fragments Robert Harbison, 2015-08-15 What is it about ruins that are so alluring so puzzling that they can hold some of us in endless wonder over the half-erased story they tell In this elegant book Robert Harbison explores the captivating hold these remains and broken pieces from architecture art and literature have on us Why are we he asks so suspicious of things that are too smooth too continuous What makes us feel when we look upon a fragment that its very incompleteness has a kind of meaning in itself Is it that our experience on earth is inherently discontinuous or that we are simply unable to believe in anything whole Harbison guides us through ruins and fragments both ancient and modern visual and textual showing us how they are crucial to understanding our current mindset and how we arrived here First looking at ancient fragments he examines the ways we have recovered restored and exhibited them as artworks Then he moves on to modernist architecture and the ways that it seeks a fragmentary form examining modern projects that have been designed into existing ruins such as the Castelvecchio in Verona Italy and the reconstruction of the Neues Museum in Berlin From there he explores literature and the works of T S Eliot Montaigne Coleridge Joyce and Sterne and how they have used fragments as the foundation for creating new work Likewise he examines the visual arts from Schwitters' collages to Ruskin's drawings as well as cinematic works from Sergei Eisenstein to Julien Temple never shying from more deliberate creators of ruin from Gordon Matta-Clark to countless graffiti artists From ancient to modern times and across every imaginable form of art Harbison takes a poetic look at how ruins have offered us a way of understanding history and how they have enabled us to create the new
