

Learning Goal:

To understand how the trajectory of an object depends on its initial velocity, and to understand how air resistance affects the trajectory.

For this problem, use the PhET simulation Projectile Motion. This simulation allows you to fire an object from a cannon, set its trajectory, and measure its range and hang time (the amount of time it is in the air).

Start the simulation. Press Play to launch an object. You can choose the object by clicking on one of the objects in the dropdown menu, drag, and drop (horizontal is not along the trajectory). To adjust the cannon barrel's angle, click and drag on the angle slider (it displays a value in degrees). You can also adjust the speed, mass, and air resistance of the object by typing in values. (Using the Resistance slider is more accurate than dragging the slider.) For this problem, set the initial speed to 20 m/s and set the drag coefficient to 0.001 kg/m. (The air resistance is proportional to the square of the velocity.)

Play around with the simulation. When you are done, click Reset and record the results prior to beginning Part A. Leave the Resistance unchanged.

Part A

First, you set the cannon purely vertical motion. The simulation equation for vertical motion (ignoring air resistance) is given by

$$y(t) = y_0 + v_0 t - \frac{1}{2} g t^2,$$

where $y_0 = 0$ is the initial position (what is 0.0 is above the ground due to the effects of the cannon), v_0 is the initial speed, and g is the acceleration due to gravity.

Shoot the baseball straight upward (at an angle of 90°) with an initial speed of 20 m/s.

How long does it take for the baseball to hit the ground?

Express your answer with the appropriate units.
