Step 1:

Using your abilities exploring magnets and electromagnets through a simulation provided by the University of Colorado at Boulder:

1. After understanding and exploring some of the magnets and electromagnets, review the text: Magnetism and Electromagnetism

2. Move the compass slowly along a circle around the wire loop. What happens with your magnet from the opposite side of the wire magnet? Describe what happens with compass needle.

The compass has the ability to give you information if we allow you to indicate where you're standing. There's a red needle and a black one. The red needle is used to indicate the direction of the magnetic field. The black needle is used to indicate the direction of the magnetic field.

3. When the red magnet the compass needle starts to spin the compass will spin?

It will spin the magnet will spin the compass will be pulled.

4. How is the strength of the electromagnet on the compass needle indicated?

It is indicated by a percentage value.

5. What are the relationships between the compass needle (magnetism) and a test charge (electricity)?

We know that there are electric charges, magnets, and we know that's important. Magnetism is a force that can be used to move things around. It's a force that can be used to move things around.

6. Move the compass along a circular path around the red magnet until you're back at the opposite side of the red magnet. Describe what happens with compass needle.

When you're at the red magnet, the compass needle is pointing towards the red magnet. When you're at the black magnet, the compass needle is pointing towards the black magnet. When you're at the black magnet, the compass needle is pointing towards the black magnet.
