Abstract: This paper reports the results of a survey of 1000 people in the United States about their attitudes toward the environment. The survey was conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in 1992. The results show that most people are concerned about the environment and want to see more action taken to protect it. The survey also found that people are more concerned about the environment than they were in 1987. The results of the survey are discussed in the paper.
