Scope For Grade Life Science 2014 On December:

Towards an embodied science of intersubjectivity: Widening the scope of social understanding research Ezequiel Di Paolo, Hanne De Jaegher, 2015-06-16 An important amount of research effort in psychology and neuroscience over the past decades has focused on the problem of social cognition. This problem is understood as how we figure out other minds relying only on indirect manifestations of other people's intentional states which are assumed to be hidden, private and internal. Research on this question has mostly investigated how individual cognitive mechanisms achieve this task. A shift in the internalist assumptions regarding intentional states has expanded the research focus with hypotheses that explore the role of interactive phenomena and interpersonal histories and their implications for understanding individual cognitive processes. This interactive expansion of the conceptual and methodological toolkit for investigating social cognition we now propose can be followed by an expansion into wider and deeply related research questions beyond but including that of social cognition narrowly construed. Our social lives are populated by different kinds of cognitive and affective phenomena that are related to but not exhausted by the question of how we figure out other minds. These phenomena include acting and perceiving together, verbal and non-verbal engagement, experiences of disconnection, management of relations in a group, joint meaning making, intimacy, trust, conflict, negotiation, asymmetric relations, material mediation of social interaction, collective action, contextual engagement with socio-cultural norms, structures and roles etc. These phenomena are often characterized by a strong participation by the cognitive agent in contrast with the spectatorial stance typical of social cognition research. We use the broader notion of embodied intersubjectivity to refer to this wider set of phenomena. This Research Topic aims to investigate relations between these different issues to help lay strong foundations for a science of intersubjectivity, the social mind writ large. To contribute to this goal we encouraged contributions in psychology, neuroscience, psychopathology, philosophy and cognitive science that address this wider scope of intersubjectivity by extending the range of explanatory factors from purely individual to interactive, from observational to participatory.

Managing Discovery in the Life Sciences Philip A. Rea, Mark V. Pauly, Lawton R. Burns, 2018-02-01 In this book distinguished scholars Philip A. Rea, Mark V. Pauly and Lawton R. Burns explore the science and management behind marketable biomedical innovations. They look at how the science actually played out through the interplay of personalities, the cultures within and between academic and corporate entities and the significance of serendipity not as a mysterious phenomenon but one intrinsic to the successes and failures of the experimental approach. With newly aggregated data and case studies they consider the fundamental economic underpinnings of investor-driven discovery management not as an obstacle or deficiency as its critics would contend or as something beyond reproach as some of its proponents might claim but as the only means by which scientists and managers can navigate the unknowable to discover new products and decide how to sell them so as to maximize the likelihood of establishing a sustainable pipeline for still more marketable biomedical innovations.

Syrian Refugee Children in the Middle East and Europe Michelle Pace, Somdeep Sen, 2018-04-09 Since the start of the conflict in Syria in 2011 Syrian refugee children have withstood violence uncertainty fear trauma and loss This book follows their journeys by bringing together scholars and practitioners to reflect on how to make their situation better and to get this knowledge to as many front liners across European and neighbouring countries in the Middle East as possible The book is premised on the underlying conception of refugee children as not merely a vulnerable contingent of the displaced Syrian population but one that possesses a certain agency for change and progress In this vein the various contributions aim to not just de securitize the conversation on migration that frequently centres on the presumed insecurity that refugees personify They also de securitize the figure and image of the refugee Through the stories of the youngest and most vulnerable they demonstrate that refugee children are not mere opaque figures on who we project our insecurities Instead they embody potentials and opportunities for progress that we need to nurture as young refugees find themselves compelled to both negotiate the practical realities of a life in exile and situate themselves in changing and unfamiliar sociocultural contexts Drawing on extensive field research this edited volume points in the direction of a new rights based framework which will safeguard the future of these children and their well being Offering a comparative lens between approaches to tackling refugees in the Middle East and Europe this book will appeal to students and scholars of refugees and migration studies human rights as well as anyone with an interest in the Middle East or Europe
