Online Student Teacher's Guide

The purpose of this guide is to help you understand the concepts of color vision and how they relate to the PhET simulation. This guide is designed for use by student teachers and is intended to be a resource for you as you prepare to teach color vision in your classroom. The guide is divided into two main sections: a theoretical overview of color vision and a practical application of the concepts using the PhET simulation. The theoretical overview section covers the basics of color vision, including the structure of the human eye, the process of color perception, and the different types of color vision deficiencies. The practical application section provides a step-by-step guide to using the PhET simulation to explore color vision and includes a series of questions and activities designed to help you understand the concepts and apply them to real-world situations. This guide is intended to be a resource for you as you prepare to teach color vision in your classroom. It is designed to be a resource for you as you prepare to teach color vision in your classroom. Additive Color Mixing

Additive color mixing is the process of combining different colors of light to create new colors. The process is based on the fact that the human eye has three types of color receptors: red, green, and blue. When these receptors are stimulated by different colors of light, they send signals to the brain, which then interprets the signals as a specific color.
