Building Interactive Systems Philip Gray, Roger Took, 2013-03-09 Architectures and tools are two important considerations in the construction of interactive computer systems The former is concerned with the optimal structural organisation of systems and the latter with the effective support of the design and management of user interfaces They are regarded as the areas of research most likely to contribute to the development of existing interactive systems in particular by providing improved architectures capable of supporting new styles of interaction and more sophisticated software tools to improve productivity This volume combines the proceedings of two workshops held in York and Glasgow which concentrated on architectures and tools respectively In doing so it addresses the problems of user interface construction from two complementary viewpoints and provides alternative perspectives on many of the central issues Some of the papers are published in expanded form to provide a more comprehensive coverage of the topics and two additional papers have been included which offer a useful insight into issues raised by the workshops The papers address formal and theoretical concerns as well as academic and commercial ones Specific topics covered include novel input models architectures for real time systems and object oriented user interface tools for X widgets NeWS and Smalltalk based applications The papers also include presentations of new tools and architectural designs

Visual Database Systems 3 Stefano Spaccapietra, Ramesh Jain, 2013-06-05 Both the way we look at data through a DBMS and the nature of data we ask a DBMS to manage have drastically evolved over the last decade moving from text to images and to sound to a lesser extent Visual representations are used extensively within new user interfaces Powerful visual approaches are being experimented for data manipulation including the investigation of three dimensional display techniques Similarly sophisticated data visualization techniques are dramatically improving the understanding of the information extracted from a database On the other hand more and more applications use images as basic data or to enhance the quality and richness of data manipulation services Image management has opened a wide area of new research topics in image understanding and analysis The IFIP 2.6 Working Group on Databases strongly believes that a significant mutual enrichment is possible by confronting ideas concepts and techniques supporting the work of researcher and practitioners in the two areas of visual interfaces to DBMS and DBMS management of visual data For this reason IFIP 2.6 has launched a series of conferences on Visual Database Systems The first one has been held in Tokyo 1989 VDB 2 was held in Budapest 1991 This conference is the third in the series As the preceding editions the conference addresses researchers and practitioners active or interested in user interfaces human computer communication knowledge representation and management image processing and understanding multimedia database techniques and computer vision

The Software Factory Challenge Herbert Weber, 1997 The Eureka Software Factory project ESF was set up by a Group of European partners in 1987 Its objective was broadly to improve the large scale software production process by introducing an industrialised approach to have The Software Factory Challenge social organisational and technical aspects The project was set up under the pan European Eureka programme and it was funded by the partners together with their national governments This book is not a history of the ESF project but rather a presentation of its main ideas and achievements and an account of how the concepts pioneered by the project have become part of a general movement in both the industrial and academic domains In this movement the facility for the production use and maintenance of large scale computer artefacts the Software Factory is treated in a wide and organic way so as to include concepts such as business value and process improvement with the development of new technologies being driven by these new wide requirements This new approach is in contrast with a narrowly technological one in which individual tasks like programming are aided by machines but in which the production process as a whole is not supported The main body of the book is divided into four Parts Part I gives a short overview of the ESF project and its ideas and goes on to attempt to place the ESF work in the context of industry as a whole with reference to both producers and users of Information Technology systems Part II sets out to explain the technological basis of the Software Factory as seen by ESF and goes on to describe some experimental and pioneering implementations of Factory Support Environments and their constituents Part III is devoted to the most complete implementation of an ESF Factory Support Environment to date Kernel 2r This Section provides a highly detailed discussion of both design and implementation issues In Part IV addresses what deployment strategies are now available to continue the spread of these ideas in order to meet the goal of better software based systems i.e. systems which are safer more economical to build more easily changed and more useful than those that have been built up to now Finally a Glossary of Terms and a list of References is given Readers those who have a professional interest in Information Technology
