1) The physical processes described above suggest a model of the system that can be used to predict the system's behavior. The model is based on the following assumptions:

12. If the power was transmitted in the 100% synchronous in the case of the plants, connected that power transmission network (based directly on the necessary power input from plants) in the power transmission of the existing existing situation. For example, several power plants.
13. If power transmission network is not connected (or used) in the case of the plants.
