

DISTRESSED DEBT REPORT

October 2010

*A publication of the Distressed Debt GroupLESSONS FROM THE LYONDELLBASELL RIGHTS OFFERING

A few years ago, rights offerings were a rarely employed means of financing an emergence from bankruptcy. However, a combination of the credit crunch and the increased entry of funds, more likely to take in equity from a borrower, into the loan market has resulted in the rise of rights offerings as a means for borrowers to raise capital to emerge from bankruptcy. Recently, many plans of reorganization have included some type of rights offering, replacing the more common issuance of bond debt. Despite criticisms that rights offerings are not a preferable means for a borrower that can utilize leverage to finance its emergence from bankruptcy, we can nonetheless expect to see more of them in the future. LyondellBasell Industries ("LyondellBasell"), Cooper-Standard Automotive Inc., GSI Group Inc. and Trident Resources Corp. represent just a few borrowers who have recently employed rights offerings to finance their emergence from bankruptcy.

This trend along with the rise of Collateralized Loan Obligations ("CLO") participation in the secondary market has given rise to a number of distinct settlement issues that can significantly delay settlements and possibly limit a buyer's ability to receive the entire package of benefits that might come out of a restructuring. These delays also increase counterparty risk and transaction costs and counterparties should take a strategic view when looking at credits with rights offerings. The settlement process in LyondellBasell provides a helpful illustration of a number of these issues.

LyondellBasell emerged from bankruptcy at the end of April following a 15 month restructuring. In connection with the restructuring, the company issued, among other things, Class A stock, which was issued as a direct proceed of the bankruptcy to senior secured claimholders in satisfaction of their claims. In addition, LyondellBasell decided to use a rights offering to finance its emergence, issuing approximately 263.9 million shares of Class B stock. Unlike the Class A stock, the rights offering for the Class B stock was voluntary. Therefore, a claimholder needed to directly subscribe for the shares, funding the purchase price at the time of subscription. Under the terms of the plan, only certain senior secured lenders were eligible to participate in the offering. As those lenders sold those rights in the secondary market, a problem emerged due to the participation of CLOs, causing loan market participants to rush settlement of outstanding loan trades with CLO counterparties, fearing that a CLO lender would not be able to purchase the Class B stock and deliver it downstream to buyers.

A CLO, though it may be able to hold stock, is often, by its nature and the terms of its organizational documents, prohibited from purchasing a defaulted asset, therefore barring its ability to participate in a rights offering. The issue generally centers on the CLO's ability to actually fund the stock purchase. A party with an outstanding loan purchase from a CLO, therefore, risked not receiving its payable shares of Class B stock, and faced a reduced return on its purchase. In order for a buyer to guarantee receipt of Class B stock from a CLO, the parties had to settle the assignment of the loans before the record date for the rights offering, thereby earning the buyer record lender status to subscribe directly for the stock. Unfortunately, given the myriad of issues (ranging from a CAM exchange¹ to a high volume of open trades) obstructing trade settlement in Lyondell, many parties were left with open trades once the record date arrived. CLOs were thus forced to find ways to subscribe for and deliver the Class B stock. For open trades involving multiple parties where the CLO was not the record holder, multilateral nettings provided a simple solution. However, for CLOs that were the record lender, other solutions had to be found. A popular solution ¹A CAM exchange, short for collateral allocation mechanism exchange, is a provision found in loan agreements to protect lenders in a bankruptcy by equalizing recovery across tranches covering multiple currencies or jurisdictions, by exchanging each lender's interest in one tranche for an investment in a strip across all tranches of the pool of debt.

The Law Reports. Queen's Bench Division, 1903 Greece International Monetary Fund. European Dept., 2024-01-24 Greece's economic outlook has improved notably but significant challenges remain The economy has resumed income convergence ending a decade of stagnation with high unemployment and low investment amid large deleveraging Real GDP has expanded beyond the pre-pandemic trend level driven by the cyclical recovery of tourism demand and the resumption of structural reforms and investment in the context of Next Generation EU Strong growth and high inflation have brought the public debt to GDP ratio down below its pre pandemic level with limited financing risks in the medium term due to the favorable debt structure. However despite regaining sovereign investment grade status and improving bank balance sheets the economy is facing macro financial challenges amid significant monetary policy tightening persistent core inflation and rising real estate prices. Structural imbalances arising from low household savings and still low level of investment as well as increasing risks from climate change are weighing on medium term growth prospects.

In 2008 the Emerg Econ Stabilization Act was signed into law. It mandates a study on mark to market accounting standards as provided by Financial Accounting Standards Board Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No 157 Fair Value Measure SFAS 157. SFAS 157 does not itself require mark to market or fair value FV accounting. Rather other accounting standards require what is more broadly known as FV of which mark to market accounting is a subset. SFAS 157 defines FV estab a framework for measuring FV in generally accepted accounting principles and requires expanded disclosures about FV measurements. This report considered the issue of FV accounting incl both mark to market accounting and SFAS 157.
