

Effects of Child Abuse on Primary Education. A Case Study of Some Selected Primary Schools in Zuru Local Government

Yohanna J A, Muhammad A M

Abstract—The research study was conducted on the effects of child abuse on primary education with the objectives of finding out how it affects primary education of pupils in Zuru Local Government area of Kebbi state. Simple random sampling technique was used to collect data from the respondents using sixty (60) structured questionnaires. Responses obtained were analyzed using simple descriptive statistics comprising frequency tables and percentages. The study discovered that Low academic achievements, truancy, absenteeism, drug abuse, delinquency, theft, prostitution and drop out from schools by the pupils were found to be the major challenges among the school pupils in the study area, and that poverty, illiteracy, hawking, gambling, drug abuse, trading and farming were contributory to the causes of child abuse in the area. Parents, teachers and child caregivers were found to mostly involve in child abuse in the area and that physical and emotional abuses were prominent in the area. A conclusion was therefore drawn from the research work that the school pupils in the study area were beset with a number of problems which hinder their academic suit and whose future is quite very bleak and endangered just as well the future of the community they belong to. Therefore research study recommended that parents should be enlightened on proper parenting, uplifting of the community's socio-economic level, staging of adequate family planning seminars, adoption of psycho therapies on the pupils deserving such, involvement of government, religious institutions and non-governmental organizations forming part of the stakeholders such as the UNICEF, NAPEP and WOTCLEF for child abuse control in the study area.

I. INTRODUCTION

According to Olaniyan and Obadara (2008), nursery and primary education occupies the first levels of education that introduce formal education or literacy to the children. Primary education is a foundation upon which all other levels of education are built. It is therefore imperative to say that the background or foundation of any formal organization of knowledge or education is the primary education. Education occupies a very significant position in the development Programme of any nation. It is the gateway to the future and the key to economic, social and political advancement of the whole world. Education is the vital instrument for social and economic mobility of any person and an instrument for transformation of the society at the national level. It remains a social process in capacity building and maintenance of society as it is a weapon for acquiring skills, relevant knowledge and habits for survival in the changing world (Fabiye, 2008).

This has thus become the fundamental reasons for the federal government's launching of the Universal Primary Education (UPE) in September, 1976. The scheme which was welcomed in any part of Nigeria aimed at among others upgrading enrolment, strengthening public institutions responsible for primary education and stimulating future planning for next phase of the Programme (U.B.E Digest, 2004). This scheme by the government in providing primary education did not yield significant result largely due to some factors which includes lack of continuity in the administration, poor coordination, corruption, mismanagement and the likes (Fabiye, 2008).

Child abuse in primary schools occurs in a wide spectrum of forms ranging from physical, abuse, sexual abuse, emotional abuse and neglect. It came to the forefront in the twentieth century which continues to be more recognized in economically developed countries than in developing countries. Children however have been abandoned for many years based primarily on the belief that children are the property of their parents. It is a global phenomenon that dates back to the times of slavery when children were captured to labour on farms for their masters without compensation. These children were malnourished and worked under adverse hardship. The menace of child abuse has prone many children into miserable, empathic and sympathy situations and the problem still exists in our societies but varying in degree from one society to the other (Conway, 1998).

Goldman et al (2003) viewed child abuse as a very complex and dangerous set of problems that includes child neglect and the physical, emotional and sexual abuse of children. He added that, most people think first of physical abuse when they hear the term. Physical abuse makes up 25% of reported cases. It is defined as physical injury inflicted upon the child with cruel or malicious intent, although the law recognizes that in some cases the parent or caretaker may not have intended to hurt the child; rather, the injury may have resulted from physical punishment. Physical abuse includes punching, beating, kicking, biting, burning, shaking or otherwise harming a child. Fatal injuries from maltreatment can result from many different acts such as burns, suffocation, poisoning etc. many physical abused children suffer multiple injuries over the years, which may go untreated to cover up for the abuse. Close observation of a child according to Goldman will generally uncover signals that abuse has occurred. (Holdman et al 2003). Hillis (2000), found out the following types of child abuse
