

Decision-Making in International Marketing

Special issue call for papers from International Marketing Review

Submissions are open between 1 June and 31 July 2020

The saturation of domestic markets and global hyper-competition have pressured many firms to expand into diverse international markets. Decision-making is a key driver of business success in the international environment (Nemkova et al., 2015). In this context, improving the efficiency and effectiveness of decision-making is critical to international marketing research theory and practice. The international marketing literature has made notable progress regarding what are the key substantive international marketing decisions that drive international marketing success (e.g., degree of standardization/adaptation, foreign market entry modes, international resource investments). A parallel body of research within international marketing decision-making addresses the process of how decisions are made to derive optimal and/or satisficing performance outcomes (e.g., emergent versus deliberate international strategies, cognitive micro-foundations, use of heuristics). Therefore, this special issue invites papers that help push the boundaries of international marketing decision-making knowledge, in the contexts of substantive decisions made, and the process of decision-making.

Knowledge regarding substantive international marketing decisions (e.g., adaptation/standardization, entry modes), their drivers and impact on performance is far from complete, with ambiguity and inconsistencies characterizing much of the field. In addition, other core decision issues such as CSR, corporate partnerships, and value creation that are of particular pertinence to today's international businesses are often overlooked. For example, current environmental decision-making models explain the adoption of single behaviors only, rather than the coaction suite of behaviors required to halt climate change (Newton et al., 2015); there is limited research on the determinants behind standardization and/or adaptation of international marketing strategies (Rao-Nicholson and Khan, 2017); much less what effective foreign market entry should actually look like given the propensity in the field to only examine individual modes independently and in silo (Oliveira et al., 2018). In this context, a more holistic view of international marketing decisions that considers a firm's entire portfolio of activities in foreign markets is needed.

With few exceptions, not much is known about how international marketing decisions are made (Nemkova et al., 2015; Souchon et al., 2016). Yet, the way international marketing decisions are made is critical for international marketing success (Hughes et al., 2019). This sphere of international marketing decision-making research, while relatively anemic, is typically underpinned by behavioral economic theories of decision-making, such that a duality in decision-making processes is identified. Supported by developments in the cognitive psychology field, the decision-making process is as reliant on emotion and intuition, as on rational cognition (Hodgkinson and Sadler-Smith, 2018). Nevertheless, international marketing and management studies are dominated by the planning paradigm (Hughes et al., 2018), while in practice, managers often see the attempt to deviate from planning as irresponsible and dangerous (Nemkova et al., 2012). The reality is, of course, much more complex where interactions
