A Business Perspective on Industry and Health Care W. B. Goldbeck,2012-12-06 The Springer Series on Industry and Health Care is intended to characterize present and future ways in which industry can influence the nation's health care system in the direction of greater efficiency and effectiveness Its potential audience includes nearly everyone interested in health care because the system's future configuration is now being influenced by corporate health programs and the involvement of individual corporate leaders in health affairs The first volume of the Springer Series provided a broad background on industry as a payer provider and consumer of health services Unlike volumes planned for the future it did not single out any particular aspect of corporate activity in health but rather identified and catalogued the many new involvements of industry both management and labor in the health care scene This the second volume in the series is designed to complement the first and to complete the process of laying the groundwork for the series as a whole Volume two covers the same vista as volume one but paints with a broader brush It seemed to us as editors of the series and authors of volume one that the academic and somewhat distant overview we provided could be rounded out in a second volume by someone with a more immediate and practical perspective on industry's involvement in health care
