

Paper Helicopter Experiment

Introduction

Customers of CHC (Cellulose Helicopter Company) have been complaining about the limited flight time of CHC helicopters as the one shown in Figure 1. A team of CHC engineers, pilots, managers and field representatives is formed to study how the standard CHC helicopter design might be modified to prolong the flight time without deterioration in stability and flying capacity.

A large number of factors that might affect the flight time are proposed during a brainstorming session, but the list is finally limited to 7 factors which are to be studied through a full factorial experiment.

Design objective

The task is to plan, run, analyze and document a factorial experiment with the aim to improve the CHC helicopter construction to prolong the flight time. Due to the low cost of the prototypes, the company wants to obtain the maximum information possible for the design, and therefore a full factorial design is selected. Since flight time may be affected by different noncontrollable factors, five repetitions of each experiment will be carried out.

This task involves building 128 prototypes and performing 640 experiments. It is estimated that 100 person-hours are required to complete it.

All the raw materials needed to build the prototypes will be provided.

Deliverables

At this stage of the process, your task is to build the prototypes, carry out the experiments and report back the results to CHC Engineering office. The factors and levels to be considered are shown in

Mesh Adaption Strategies for Vortex-dominated Flows Sean Javad Kamkar, 2011 A new adaptive mesh refinement strategy that is based on a coupled feature detection and error estimation approach is developed The overall goal is to apply the proper degree of refinement to key vortical features in aircraft and rotorcraft wakes The refinement paradigm is based on a two stage process wherein the vortical regions are initially identified for refinement using feature detection and then the appropriate resolution is determined by the local solution error The feature detection scheme uses a local normalization procedure that allows it to automatically identify regions for refinement with threshold values that are not dependent upon the convective scales of the problem An error estimator based on the Richardson Extrapolation method then supplies the identified features with appropriate levels of refinement The estimator is shown to be well behaved for steady state and time accurate aerodynamic flows The above strategy is implemented within the Helios code which features a dual mesh paradigm of unstructured grids in the near body domain and adaptive Cartesian grids in the off body domain A main objective of this work is to control the adaption process so that high fidelity wake resolution is obtained in the off body domain The approach is tested on several theoretical and practical vortex dominated flow fields in an attempt to resolve wingtip vortices and rotor wakes Accuracy improvements to rotorcraft performance metrics and increased wake resolution are simultaneously documented

Motions of Tilt Float Vehicles in Waves Roderick A. Barr, Milton Martin, 1963 The non linear equations of motion for the heave pitch or roll and surge or sway motion of a tilt float supported amphibious vehicle drifting in a seaway are derived These equations are programmed for an IBM

7090 electronic digital computer and the results of computations which show the effect of various parameters on the heave and pitch response to waves of all significant frequencies contained in a seaway are presented The principal parameters investigated are the effects of the slenderness ratio of the floats the vertical elevation of the c g of the vehicle the radius of gyration of the vehicle the cant angle of the floats vertical and horizontal damping plates the geometric arrangement of the floats and wave height non linear effect Author
