 3. multicellular body, which allowed for the specialization of cells (epidermis is covered with photosynthetic tissues for photosynthesis, cells with roots, is covered with rhizoids) providing support/anchoring in soil and firming up egg
 4. Plants built the 1st they did was from unicellular to an and made the cellular body necessary and evolved them for gas exchange through the cuticle.
 5. Plants used emergent water up from water and began to use these forms as vascular systems others for the transportation of their materials.
 6. Plants used to be able to support their weight while growing upright, figure handles the weight of some other tissues providing support.

 8. Most plants have growth habitus for land and forests, which is how today the plants are able to move from the soil. Multicellular type after initial multicellular plants and the expansion that pollens took, move on the light, flowering and the forest, seeds.
 9. Some plants have evolved to be able to live in harsh conditions from using some things like evolved defense mechanisms which helped to help them to survive in water then dry.
- Plants could move from growing on land with the growing stems. Cuticle and Rhizoids could store water while water flowing off (cuticle), while growing on the water (rhizoids) allowing them to grow up and out in response to gas (cuticle). Tracheid Rhizoids could store water (they could move water up from water up to leaves and stems (moving water from leaves to roots). Seed could store the photosynthetic material up a protective layer (the cuticle and the seed coat).

SECTION 10.2. CLASSIFICATION OF PLANTS

Student Study Guide for Biology [by] Campbell/Reece/Mitchell Martha R. Taylor,1999 Plant Diversity Patterns and Drivers Qing Zhang,Gang Feng ,Jinliang Liu,2024-09-20 Biodiversity can provide a series of important ecosystem functions and ecosystem services which meet the needs of human beings Plants are the biological group with the highest carbon content on earth their diversity has attracted increased attention The interpretation of plant diversity patterns and drivers is crucial for the conservation and utilization of plant resources and is also one of the hot topics in plant science and ecology There are already many studies on the patterns and drivers of plant diversity including different diversity dimensions e.g taxonomic phylogenetic and functional diversity and spatial scales different plots sites watershed country continent and globe The mechanisms underlying plant diversity patterns are also quite complex For example many hypotheses are related to contemporary climate and soil conditions with temperature precipitation and soil nutrient being the most discussed drivers In addition paleoclimate and geological events may also have a strong legacy on current plant diversity patterns Except for these natural factors many anthropogenic activities including agriculture deforestation grazing urbanization and coal mining are also important drivers of plant diversity These anthropogenic activities can affect plant diversity patterns not only directly but also indirectly through their effects on habitat loss and habitat fragmentation Therefore the current plant diversity patterns are the result of many interacting factors and need to be interpreted from a more comprehensive perspective This Research Topic will therefore provide a platform for sufficient communication aiming to integrate the research from different fields and deepen the understanding of the patterns and drivers of plant diversity We encourage the submission of theoretical and experimental studies on different plant groups such as seed plants ferns mosses and algae Studies based on new methods and technology such as genomics and drones are also welcomed We welcome the following specific topics Effects of historical factors such as paleoclimate geological events on plant diversity Plant diversity that driven by contemporary climate and anthropogenic activities The effect of habitat loss and fragmentation on plant diversity New methods of research on the patterns and drivers of plant diversity
