

Blackburne & Leary 1975, 1977, 1978: Ethical and Developmental Theory: Ethical theory involves normative questions: Is it possible to achieve a good society? What are the values?

There is a large gap in understanding values. Values are defined as beliefs of something being a good or bad, or something to be done or avoided. In this understanding, there is a gap between what is understood and what is done. This gap is the gap between the ideal and the real. The gap is the gap between the ideal and the real. The gap is the gap between the ideal and the real. The gap is the gap between the ideal and the real.

For example, values are defined as beliefs of something being a good or bad, or something to be done or avoided.

Values are often defined as beliefs of something being a good or bad, or something to be done or avoided. This definition of values is based on the idea that values are beliefs of something being a good or bad, or something to be done or avoided.
