Data sharing for digital markets contestability Richard Feasey, Alexandre de Streel, 2020-09-30 As the European Commission is preparing its Data Act this new CERRE report provides concrete recommendations for effective data sharing governance more specifically when a party has significant incentives not to share data The forthcoming data act should provide better incentives to stimulate two forms of data sharing individual users data sharing and bulk data sharing between firms Data sharing is seen by many as an effective means to safeguard competition in digital markets allowing smaller players to get access to precious data The authors of the CERRE report Richard Feasey and Alexandre de Streel have analysed current EU rules imposing data sharing and conclude these do not provide the comprehensive governance framework needed for data sharing to effectively take place Given the incentives a gatekeeper platform may have not to share data and the potential for this platform to leverage into other markets we recommend imposing an obligation to share data explain Richard Feasey The most important and difficult task for regulators lies in determining the type and scope of data that is to be shared and which organisations should be obliged to share it We conclude that better incentives and governance are needed to stimulate two forms of data sharing in the EU data about individuals and bulk data between firms Regulating recipients as well as donors Regulation for data sharing should not be viewed as being limited to the oversight of a small number of large platforms that might be obliged to share data It also requires strict oversight of potentially a very large number of smaller firms that might seek access to such data Regulators will need to establish an effective and comprehensive system of regulation of both donors and recipients of data to guard against misuse and to ensure trust on all sides Sharing individual users data Over time the sharing or porting of data about individual users data could accumulate and be used for other purposes For this reason the authors recommend that obligations to share data about individual users should be quite extensive and apply to digital platforms which may be described as meeting the gatekeeper minus threshold The report encourages regulators to require the sharing of individual user data without any payment If high transaction costs and uncertain users benefits prevent the effectiveness of this approach policymakers should consider more radical approaches such as allowing the use of an opt out option rather than the current opt in for the sharing of personal data in order to ensure fair competition in digital markets The European Commission should consider provisions in the forthcoming Data Act to enable the use of opt out arrangements for the sharing of personal data to preserve market contestability under certain prescribed conditions Although this may represent some loss of consumer sovereignty over their data such a trade off may need to be made if data sharing arrangements are to achieve their aim of ensuring contestability in digital markets Bulk sharing of user data The competitive impact of the bulk transfer of aggregate user data could be significant since the volume of data to be shared is likely to be very substantial and may represent a significant proportion of the donor platform s data assets Since obtaining individual consent from every user would not be feasible in these circumstances regulators and policymakers should consider other mechanisms to enable the bulk sharing of non anonymised user data Alternatively regulators should consider requiring the platform that controls the data to allow third party access to the full data set so that third parties may train algorithms or otherwise derive the same sorts of insights from the data that are available to the incumbent Recipients of aggregated data should be required to pay for the data with the payment varying according to the volume and value of the data being shared and not simply the costs of implementing the data sharing arrangements or storing the data The primary concern here is to preserve incentives for both parties in the sharing arrangement to innovate and invest in existing or new digital services to acquire additional data for themselves The Commission should undertake a study to consider how regulators would establish wholesale prices for data that was to be shared The challenge ahead European policymakers should consider legislative changes with the Data Act to enable the sharing of personal data on an opt out basis under certain narrowly prescribed circumstances and to ensure contestability in digital markets Finally data sharing remedies that the report considers arise from the assumption that digital platforms will continue to derive significant market power from their centralised control of big data sets Regulators and policymakers should also keep an eye on new technologies which might enable a much greater degree of decentralisation and wider distribution of data thereby removing the very sources of market power which this report has sought to address This report follows another CERRE research analysing the processes that turn data into economic value for online search e commerce and media platforms

SongPressRadioSocial Movement MediaRegions Intellectual Property, Market Power and the Public Interest Inge Govaere, Hanns Ullrich, 2008 The main objective of the contributions to this book is to bring together two seemingly different strands of thought the competition law analysis of the exercise of intellectual property and the discussion about the proper limits of protection which at present takes place inside the intellectual property community Both are burdened with their own problems particularly so in Europe where market integration and the divide between exclusionary and exploitative abuses ask for a more dimensional approach and where the shaping of intellectual property protection is under not only the influence of many interests and policies but a multi level exercise of the Community and its member states The question is whether nevertheless there is a common concern or whether the frequently asserted convergence of the operation and of the goals of competition law and intellectual property law does not mask a fundamental difference namely that of on the one hand protecting freedom of competition against welfare reducing restrictions of competition only and on the other limiting the protection of exclusive rights in the public interest of maintaining free access to general knowledge The purpose of the workshop held in 2007 at the College of Europe Bruges and whose results are published here was to ask which role market power plays in either context which role it may legitimately play and which role it ought not to play A tentative answer might be found in the general principle that just as intellectual property does not enjoy a particular status under competition law so competition law may not come as a white knight to rescue intellectual property protection from itself However the meaning of that principle differs according to both the context of the acquisition and the exploitation of intellectual property and it differs from one area of intellectual property to the other Therefore an attempt has also been made to cover more facets of the prism like complex of problems than is generally done Focus On: 100 Most Popular Television Series by Competition Policy for Small Market Economies Michal S. GAL, Michal S Gal, 2009-06-30 Michal Gal's thorough analysis shows the effects of market size on competition policy ranging from rules of thumb to more general policy prescriptions such as goals and remedial tools Competition policy in small economies is becoming increasingly important since the number of small jurisdictions adopting such policy is rapidly growing Gal's focus extends beyond domestic competition policy to the evaluation of the current trend toward the worldwide harmonization of policies

Official Journal of the European Communities, 1989-03

Intellectual Property and Competition Law Peter Chroczel, Moritz Lorenz, 2016-05-15 Inevitably every marketed product or service can always be located at the intersection of intellectual property law and competition law a nexus rife with potential problems throughout the life of an intellectual property IP right This important book is the first to focus in depth on this intersection in the European context masterfully elucidating the consequences for IP rights owners from the right's inception to its transfer sale or demise The authors describes and analyses the following topics and more in detail characteristics purpose and theoretical justifications of IP rights obtaining maintaining and exploiting an IP right effects of provisions of European competition law regarding cartels block exemptions abuse of dominant position free movement of goods and merger control competition between originator companies and generic companies licensing especially the problem of refusal to grant a license and enforcement of an IP right The book analyses all major cases affecting aspects of the intersection supported by an examination of the historical background and political influence concerning the two areas of European law There are also special chapters on the prominent and influential national legal systems of Germany the United States China The Netherlands and the United Kingdom An annex provides texts of the major antitrust regulations dealing with European IP rights As a biography of IP rights focusing on areas of entanglement with European competition law this book is without peer Its clear sighted view of the status quo and emerging trends in the two fields will be of immeasurable value to practitioners policymakers and academics dealing with issues at the intersection of intellectual property law and competition law in Europe and elsewhere

Identifying Exclusionary Abuses by Dominant Undertakings under EU Competition Law Eirik Østerud, 2010-11-15 Under Article 102 TFEU dominant firms are allowed to compete but only to the extent their market behaviour does not constitute an abuse Needless to say the wording of the article neither explains what an abusive restriction of competition is nor how such a practice can be identified Rather than developing a one size fits all test applicable to all forms of market behaviour by dominant firms the European Court of Justice ECJ and the General Court ex Court of First Instance have set out a system of tests for separate categories of conduct Drawing on the full range of the EU Courts relevant case law this very useful book analyses the conditions that must be fulfilled for a broad range of business practices to be deemed abusive within the meaning of Article 102 TFEU and also identifies the criteria that must be fulfilled for a practice to be objectively justified The potentially abusive practices studied here as defined in the relevant case law include the following predatory pricing margin squeezing exclusivity agreements loyalty rebates refusals to supply to induce exclusivity secondary line price discrimination vexatious litigation acquisitions of intellectual property rights IPRs refusals to supply necessary inputs provision of storage equipment on the condition of exclusive use selective above cost price cuts tying technological integration and refusal to license IPRs The author also contrasts the Commission's decisional practice with the case law assesses approaches under U S antitrust law to similar forms of conduct and incorporates insights from economic theory This study greatly enhances our understanding of the distinction between abusive conduct and lawful competition In the course of its clarification of the EU Courts responses to individual forms of market behaviour an overall approach to the identification of exclusionary abuses under Article 102 TFEU begins to come into view Apart from the important new synthesis the work offers legal scholars there can be little doubt this book will prove a valuable asset and even an inspiration to competition lawyers
