U S Navy Arctic Roadmap 2014 203:

U.S. Navy Arctic Roadmap U. S. Department of the Navy, 2014-12-09 The United States is an Arctic nation through the state of Alaska and its surrounding territorial and Exclusive Economic Zone waters located in and around the Arctic Circle The United States Navy as the maritime component of the Department of Defense has global leadership responsibilities to provide ready forces for current operations and contingency response that include the Arctic Ocean The Arctic Region remains a challenging operating environment with a harsh climate vast distances and little infrastructure These issues coupled with limited operational experience are just a few substantial challenges the Navy will have to overcome in the Arctic Region While the Region is expected to remain a low threat security environment where nations resolve differences peacefully the Navy will be prepared to prevent conflict and ensure national interests are protected In the coming decades the Arctic Ocean will be increasingly accessible and more broadly used by Arctic and non Arctic nations seeking the Region s abundant resources and trade routes Due to the significant retreat of sea ice previously unreachable areas have started to open for maritime use several weeks each year The predicted rise in oil and gas development fishing tourism and mineral mining could alter the Region s strategic importance as Arctic and non Arctic nations make investments Despite this gradual ice opening the Region s frequent harsh weather and sea conditions are significant limiting factors for Arctic Ocean operations This update of the 2009 Navy Arctic Roadmap provides guidance necessary to prepare the Navy to respond effectively to future Arctic Region contingencies delineates the Navy s leadership role and articulates the Navy s support to achieve national priorities in the Region Navy functions in the Arctic Region are no different from those in other maritime regions however the Arctic Region environment makes the execution of many of these functions much more challenging In May 2013 President Obama published the National Strategy for the Arctic Region defining the desired end state as an Arctic Region stable and free of conflict where nations act responsibly in a spirit of trust and cooperation and where economic and energy resources are developed in a sustainable manner In November 2013 the Secretary of Defense published the Department of Defense Arctic Strategy identifying two supporting objectives to the National Strategy

Governing the North American Arctic Dawn Alexandra Berry, Nigel Bowles, Halbert Jones, 2016-04-08 Though it has been home for centuries to indigenous peoples who have mastered its conditions the Arctic has historically proven to be a difficult region for governments to administer Extreme temperatures vast distances and widely dispersed patterns of settlement have made it impossible for bureaucracies based in far off capitals to erect and maintain the kind of infrastructure and institutions that they have built elsewhere As climate change transforms the polar regions this book seeks to explore how the challenges of governance are developing and being met in Alaska the Canadian Far North and Greenland while also drawing upon lessons from the region s past Though the experience of each of these jurisdictions is unique their place within democratic federal systems and the prominence within each of them of issues relating to the rights of indigenous peoples situates them as part of an identifiably North American Arctic Today as this volume shows their institutions are evolving to address contemporary issues of security environmental protection indigenous rights and economic development U.S. Navy Arctic Roadmap, 2009 1 Scientific evidence indicates that the Earth's climate is changing and the most rapid changes are occurring in the Arctic Because the Arctic is primarily a maritime environment the Navy must consider the changing Arctic in developing future policy strategy force structure and investment 2 During the Chief of Naval Operations eNO Executive Board on 15 May 2009 CNO directed the establishment of Task Force Climate Change TFCC and the development of an Arctic roadmap for the Navy Enclosure 1 provides a holistic chronological list of Navy action items strategic objectives and desired effects regarding the Arctic for Fiscal Years FY 2010 2014 3 The Navy Arctic Roadmap will remain in effect until promulgation of the next Quadrennial Defense Review QDR report in FY 14 when the roadmap will be reviewed and revised to incorporate QDR guidance Arctic Security Considerations and the U.S. Navy's Roadmap for the Arctic David W. Titley, Courtney C. St. John, Naval War College (U.S.), 2010 Arctic sea ice melting associated with global climate change has caused leaders from the United States and the international community to reconsider the national security implications of the region Taking into account nearly a century of experience in the Arctic new national policy existing strategy and geopolitical implications of the changing environment the U S Navy has developed an Arctic Roadmap that will guide policy investment and action regarding the region With key themes of improved environmental understanding informed investments increased experience cooperative partnerships and support for the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea the Arctic Roadmap is meant to ensure Navy readiness and capability and result in recognition of the Navy as a valued partner by the joint interagency and international communities 2014 American Arctic Strategy Department of Defense, U. S. Government, 2018-03-02 Since 2009 the United States has progressively released strategic documents outlining the U S interests and national objectives in the Arctic Although these documents recognize increasing interests of the United States in the region they do not adequately address all the strategic risks at stake in the Arctic and do not provide clear guidance to the Department of Defense DoD for defensive lines of effort The strategic approach of the United States to the Arctic is one of accepting the current stable and conflict free Arctic region as remaining the same in the future This strategic approach is adequate for the near term however it lacks specific guidance to DoD on how to prepare for possible conflict in the future Recent events involving Russia in the Ukraine and China in the South China Sea provide historical context to the willingness of nations to use military means to defend their national interests Without adequate defensive posturing competition over Arctic resources could become the first direct existential threat to U S sovereignty This paper will provide a strategic assessment of the Arctic from the Department of Defense perspective and provide recommendations for the combatant commander to prepare defensive lines of effort should they be needed in 10 15 years or beyond CHAPTER 1 ARCTIC STRATEGIC ISSUES Mineral and Resource Protection Freedom of Navigation Sea Lines of Communication Arctic Militarization Russia China CHAPTER 2

The United States is one of eight Arctic nations Approximately 1 000 miles of the Alaskan coastline border and 200 000 square nautical miles of the U S exclusive economic zone are encompassed in the Arctic Ocean As economic opportunities in the Arctic steadily increase the U S is realizing the strategic importance of the Arctic but lacks the infrastructure command and control structure and Arctic capable assets to meet national strategic objectives Since 2009 the U S has progressively released strategic documents outlining the U S interests and national objectives in the Arctic Although these documents recognize the increasing interests of the United States in the region they do not adequately address all the strategic risks at stake in the Arctic and do not provide clear guidance to the Department of Defense DoD for defensive lines of effort The U S strategic approach to the Arctic is that of accepting the current stable and conflict free Arctic region as remaining the same in the future This strategic approach is adequate for the near term however it lacks specific guidance to DoD on how to prepare for possible conflict in the future Recent events involving Russia in the Ukraine and China in the South China Sea provide historical context to the willingness of nations to use military means to defend their national interests Without adequate defensive posturing competition over Arctic resources could become the first direct existential threat to U S sovereignty This paper will provide a strategic assessment of the Arctic from the Department of Defense perspective and provide recommendations for the combatant commander to prepare defensive lines of effort should they be needed in 10 15 years or beyond
