

Types of Solids

What are some common types of solids and their properties?

Object

Most of solids are the most stable substances having comparatively low energy of melting process. But some solids are not so stable as others. Solids are divided into two main types: crystalline and amorphous. Crystalline solids have a regular arrangement of atoms, while amorphous solids have a disordered arrangement of atoms. The properties of solids depend on their internal structure and the nature of the particles involved in the solid.
