

TYPES OF HOOKS FOR ESSAYS

1. Quote

This involves opening your essay with a quote by a well-known person. Being from a recognizable source, a quote adds credibility to the Author's position and backs up their position on a particular topic

2. Fact

In a fact hook, you begin your essay with a proven fact on a topic. This type of hook surprises the readers by presenting an interesting fact on the topic

3. Anecdote

An anecdote involves opening your essay with a captivating story, a funny occurrence, or a personal experience. Though it should not be just any other story, it should be related to the central theme of your topic

4. A question

This involves beginning an essay with a rhetorical question. This allows the reader to contemplate the question before reading the rest of the piece.

5. Description

This is where you open your writing with a vivid description of something related to the subject. A description hook creates an image in the reader's mind establishing an interest to know more.

6. Common misconception

Starting your essay by disregarding a common misconception can intrigue the readers' interest by enlightening them on something they may have misunderstood. Remember to keep it simple and direct to the point.
