

Chapter 2: The U.S. and Global Economies

1. What, How, and For Whom?

A. What Do We Produce?

Goods and services produced are divided into two categories:

- (1) Consumption goods and services are items that are bought by individuals and governments and are used up in the current period. Consumption goods and services account for about 78.5 percent of total production.
- (2) Capital goods are goods that are bought by businesses and governments to increase their productive resources to use over future periods to produce other goods and services. Capital goods account for about 21.5 percent of total production.

B. How Do We Produce?

Goods and services are produced using four factors of production: land, labor, capital, and entrepreneurship.

- (1) Land is the “gifts of nature” or natural resources, which includes not only land in the everyday sense but also minerals, energy, water, air, wild plants, animals, birds and fish.
- (2) Labor is the work time and work effort that people devote to producing goods and services. Human capital is the knowledge and skills that people obtain from education, on-the-job training, and work experience.
- (3) Capital consists of the tools, instruments, machines, buildings, and other items that have been produced in the past and that businesses now use to produce goods and services. Capital does not include financial capital like money, stocks, or bonds.
- (4) Entrepreneurship is the human resource that organizes labor, land, and capital to produce goods and services. Entrepreneurs make business decisions and bear the risks that arise from these decisions.

C. For Whom Do We Produce?

- (1) Rent is paid for the use of land.
  - (2) Wages are paid for the services of labor.
  - (3) Interest is paid for the use of capital.
  - (4) and entrepreneurs receive a profit or incur a loss.
- The functional distribution of income is the distribution of income among the factors of production. In the United States in 2014 labor received 63 percent of total income.
  - The personal distribution of income is the distribution of income among household. In the United States in 2014 the richest 20 percent of households earned 50 percent of total income and the poorest 20 percent of households earned only 3 percent of total income.
  - The distribution of income is constantly changing and is becoming increasingly unequal.

2. The Global Economy

A. The People: The world population was approximately 7.3 billion (approximately 322 million in the United States) as of November 8, 2015.

B. The Economies: The International Monetary Fund classifies the 176 economies into two broad categories:

- (1) Advanced economies. These are the 29 countries (or areas) that have the highest standard of living. Included in this list are the United States, Japan, Germany, France, Italy, the United Kingdom, and Canada. Also included are the newly industrialized Asian economies. Almost 1 billion people live in advanced economies.
- (2) Emerging market and developing economies. The emerging market economies are the 28 countries in Europe and Asia that were, until the early 1990s, part of the Soviet Union or its satellites and today are moving toward market-based economies. The developing economies are the 119 countries in Africa, Asia, the Middle East, Europe, and Central and South America that have not achieved a high standard of living. Approximately 500 million people living in emerging market economies and more than 5.5 billion people live in developing economies. The BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China, and South Africa) comprise 42% of the global population and hold
