This book explores the ways in which the current metatextual turn in both the usual genres in which it appears horror and sci fi fantasy and its movement into drama and sitcom represents the next turn in television s inherent self awareness It traces this element throughout television s history growing from the more modest reflexivity of programs awareness of themselves as created objects in a particular medium to the more significant breaking of the fictive illusion and therefore the perceived distance between the audience and the series Erin Giannini shows how the increased currency of metatextual television in the contemporary era can be tied to a viewership well versed in its stories and production as well as able and willing to talk back via social media If television reflects culture to a certain extent this increased reflexivity mirrors that responsive audience as a consequence of the lack of distance that metafiction embraces As Robert Stam traced the use and implications of reflexivity in film and literature this book does the same for television further problematizing John Ellis s glance theory in terms of both production and spectatorship
