

This sample manual has been designed for use by a business performing trade measurement work of most licence classes/subclasses as defined in the National Trade Measurement Regulations 2009 and requires a small amount of customisation, assisted by following the instructions below. Where licence class 4 subclass 4.3 alcoholic beverage measures by batch test is the only licence class held, please use the special manual template developed specifically for that class/subclass.

Instructions:

1. Substitute all yellow highlighted sections with appropriate information for your business as described in that highlighted section. The information should be customised to your reflect your business practice where applicable. No yellow should remain once you have completed a section, however where you use information provided in the example you can simply highlight the yellow, select the highlight icon in the top toolbar, then select none.
2. All grey highlighted areas (such as this section) are for your information only, provided as a guide. The grey highlighted text should be deleted after you have finished reading and applying the information. No grey text should remain in the document.
3. All other sections (no colour) are generic in nature, suitable for most business. You should become familiar with these parts of the document but may leave. Should you feel a section that has no colour does not apply to your business practice, or your business practice differs from that written, please discuss this with NMI before changing/removing.
4. The revision record below is used when minor changes/updates are made to the manual. It is used as a summary of the changes and used only AFTER the first issue has been made.
