professions engineers accountants scientists and nurses In addition I compare incomes between people who graduate from teacher colleges and non teacher colleges Using data from Thailand Labor Force Survey from 1985 to 2005 I find that teachers are the most poorly paid of all professions including nurses The difference in terms of an opportunity cost between male and female teachers is also striking Among the graduates from teacher colleges male graduates earn more than their peers if they chose other occupations whereas female graduates earn less if they make other choices The third essay looks at the reasons teachers choose part time jobs the type of jobs they choose and the amount of income they receive from these jobs as well as factors influencing these decisions I find that approximately 20-25% of Thai teachers participated in moonlighting activities The majority of them have part time jobs including tutoring selling food and other products and farming Low salaries and high level of indebtedness are the most important factors associated with the increased likelihood of having a part time job However economic status does not correlate significantly with their decision to tutor as their part time job
