Prenatal Nutrition

For most, the only prenatal nutrition advice we receive is take a multivitamin, avoid alcohol, and no lunchmeat. Am I right? But we can be doing so much more to support our bodies...we are growing a little human. Forget all conventional nutrition advice you've been told and lets dive into nutrition needs during pregnancy.

Make it a goal to eat more real foods in your diet. Reduce intake of sugary, processed foods. Be mindful of portion sizes. Recognize when certain foods leave you feeling sluggish. It is an opportunity to nourish your body and improve your health.

BPA/Bisphenol A is a chemical that can affect fetal development. It is a factor for premature delivery and miscarriage. It may also impact your blood sugar metabolism. Avoid plastic or stainless steel food containers or use them carefully. Read labels on cosmetics and personal care products. Avoid the use of perfumes and scented products, such as candles, and laundry detergents.

Mercury is a toxic metal that can readily cross the placenta. Mercury can harm fetal brain and nervous system. More exposure, avoid high-mercury fish (swordfish, shark, king mackerel, tilefish) and limit tuna to 6oz/week.

Alcohol readily crosses the placenta and can greatly impact fetal development. Use of alcohol depletes fetal nutrient needs, especially those that play a large role in brain development.

Prenatal Nutrition Guide:

Prenatal Vitamin Guide Celina Hywel, AI, 2025-02-15 Prenatal Vitamin Guide offers a comprehensive resource for expectant mothers and those planning pregnancy focusing on the crucial role of prenatal vitamins in ensuring healthy fetal development. It addresses the significance of key nutrients like folate, iron, and vitamin D, highlighting their impact on neural tube formation, bone growth, and overall infant health. It uniquely emphasizes personalized supplementation based on individual risk factors and dietary habits, moving beyond generic recommendations. The book's approach is fact-based and accessible, avoiding complex jargon while empowering parents with knowledge.
