

Male Reproductive System

In boys puberty usually occurs between the ages of 10 and 17. The changes that occur then include an increase in growth, broadening of the shoulders, deepening of the voice, growth of facial and body hair, and development of the reproductive organs as they become capable of reproduction.

Below are simplified diagrams of the male reproductive system. Read the brief description of each reproductive organ and look at the labeled drawing. Then fill in the names of the reproductive organs on the sketch. Complete the activity at the bottom of the page by matching each reproductive organ with its description. Place the correct number on each line.

MALE REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS

Pituitary gland: This gland, controlled by the hypothalamus, is located at the base of the brain. It produces growth and reproduction hormones. One of these hormones causes the testes to produce sperm.

Testes or testicles: Two glands that produce the male reproductive cells or sperm. Sperm cells are necessary to fertilize a female egg cell.

Scrotum: Soft external sac containing the testes.

Vas deferens: Narrow tubes that carry sperm from the testes to the seminal vesicles.

Seminal vesicle: One of the two sacs which produce a thick fluid that carries the sperm.

Prostate: A gland which produces a fluid that becomes part of the semen.

Urethra: A narrow tube that runs from the bladder through the penis. This provides a passageway to the outside of the body for urine or semen.

Penis: External male organ through which semen or urine leaves the body.
