What Are Hurricanes and How Do They Form?

A hurricane is a rotating storm that forms over warm ocean waters. It has strong winds, heavy rain, and can cause a lot of damage. It is a big part of Earth's weather. Let's learn how hurricanes form and what makes them powerful.

How do hurricanes form? They form over the warm ocean. The ocean gives the storm the heat and moisture it needs to grow. The air above the ocean rises and cools, and that air rushes in to take its place. This causes the air to spin and get stronger. They form a big rotating storm.

What is the "eye" of a hurricane? The eye is calm, but around it, the winds are very strong. These winds can blow down to the ground. The area around the eye is called the "eye wall" where the strongest winds and heaviest rain are. The eye wall can stretch for many miles.

How are hurricanes measured? There are five categories in total. A Category 1 hurricane has the weakest winds, and a Category 5 hurricane has the strongest. A Category 5 hurricane can have winds stronger than 157 miles per hour, which can damage buildings and trees.

How do hurricanes affect people? Hurricanes can cause the water to storm. They often cause flooding and damage. When a hurricane reaches land, it can bring heavy rain and strong winds that can damage homes and trees.

Language, Power and Pedagogy Jim Cummins, 2000-09-22 Population mobility is at an all time high in human history One result of this unprecedented movement of peoples around the world is that in many school systems monolingual and monocultural students are the exception rather than the rule particularly in urban areas This shift in demographic realities entails enormous challenges for educators and policy makers What do teachers need to know in order to teach effectively in linguistically and culturally diverse contexts How long does it take second language learners to acquire proficiency in the language of school instruction What are the differences between attaining conversational fluency in everyday contexts and developing proficiency in the language registers required for academic success What adjustments do we need to make in curriculum instruction and assessment to ensure that second language learners understand what is being taught and are assessed in a fair and equitable manner How long do we need to wait before including second language learners in high stakes national examinations and assessments What role if any should be accorded students first language in the curriculum Do bilingual education programs work well for poor children from minority language backgrounds or should they be reserved only for middle class children from the majority or dominant group In addressing these issues this volume focuses not only on issues of language learning and teaching but also highlights the ways in which power relations in the wider society affect patterns of teacher student interaction in the classroom Effective instruction will inevitably challenge patterns of coercive power relations in both school and society
