changes in family relationships and to explore the larger question of the development of a modern subjectivity among the people. Whereas the villagers she met in the sixties stressed the importance of meeting social obligations, the people she interviewed more recently emphasized the need to think for oneself. Status concerns in choosing a spouse had apparently been replaced by romantic love, patriarchal authority by partnership marriages, parental demands for obedience by hopes of earning children's affection, mourners' respect for the dead by personal expressions of grief. In each of these areas, the author detected a modern concern for producing oneself, which emerged with changes in how villagers experienced social inequality. Collier notes that when inheritance appeared to determine social status, villagers protected family reputations and properties by demonstrating concern for what others might say. Once villagers began participating in the national job market, where individual achievement appeared to determine a worker's income, they focused on realizing their inner abilities and productive capacities. Sensitivity to one's feelings, thoughts, and aptitudes along with rational assessments of the costs and benefits entailed in choosing how to use them testified to a person's unceasing efforts to realize inner potentials. The author also traces shifts in the meaning of tradition, suggesting that although modern people cannot be traditional, they must have traditions in order to produce themselves.

What Moroccan Cinema? Sandra Gayle Carter, 2009-08-16 From its early focus on documentary film and nation building to its more recent spotlight on contemporary culture and feature filmmaking, Moroccan cinema has undergone tremendous change since the country's independence in 1956. In What Moroccan Cinema: A Historical and Critical Study 1956-2006, Sandra Gayle Carter chronicles the changes in Moroccan laws, institutions, ancillary influences, individuals active in the field, representative films, and film culture during this fifty year span Focusing on Moroccan history and institutions relative to the cinema industry such as television newspaper criticism and Berber videomaking What Moroccan Cinema is an intriguing study of the ways in which three historical periods shaped the Moroccan cinema industry Carter provides an insightful and thorough treatment of the cinema institution discussing exhibition and distribution censorship and cinema clubs and caravans Carter grounds her analysis by exploring representative films of each respective era The groundbreaking analysis offered in What Moroccan Cinema will prove especially valuable to those in film and Middle Eastern studies Howard Barker's Theatre of Seduction
