Plants like sunflowers and wheat respond to light, which causes them to grow towards it. This is called phototropism. While seaweed and algae do the same thing, they grow away from light. These are called negative phototropism. When some environmental conditions becomes unfavorable, plants can turn away from those conditions to the other side. This is called negative gravitropism. Plants turn away from gravity and tend towards light, which gives them energy to adapt to environmental changes. A stimulus is a growth factor that causes plants to grow. Concentrated stimuli tend influence plant growth in either light, water, or chemicals. Plant tropisms affect plant growth in three main ways: gravitropism, phototropism, and chemotropism. Gravitropism causes plants to grow vertically, such as needles and stems. Phototropism affects plants to grow towards light, such as leaves. Chemotropism affects plants to grow towards chemicals, such as nitrogen. Plants, like sunflower, are stimulated by light, but the direction of the stimulus is not a stimulus.

Plant tropisms are the result of growth. This type of growth occurs when the growth of a plant's organs, such as stems or roots, go in one direction. Other cells in the organism sense this differential growth of other cells which stimulates the growth of other organs (stems, roots, etc.). It is called phototropism if the sensitive part of the plant is sensitive to light. Plants, like sunflowers, are thought to help the differential growth of a plant's organs, causing the plant to curve towards the source of light. In the direction of a stimulus is positive (growth away from a stimulus is negative). Between the two, positive growth (growth away from a stimulus) is negative (growth towards a stimulus), but the results, such as growth, are the same.

Photosynthesis

Photosynthesis is the process of growth of an organism in response to light. For growth, an organism needs energy and to move in its environment. Such plants, such as algae and seaweed, have chlorophyll, which absorbs the light energy needed for photosynthesis. Then plants use this energy to make glucose, which is used for growth. In the direction of a light source, photosynthesizing plants will grow. On the side of the stem that is furthest from light, there is less glucose, so the plant will grow towards the light. On the side of the stem that is closest to light, there is more glucose, so the plant will grow away from the light. Thus, the plant will grow towards the light. As a result, the plant will grow in the direction away from the side of the accumulated glucose and toward the light.

Thimann,2012-12-02 The Action of Hormones in Plants and Invertebrates focuses on the mechanisms of action of hormones in plants and invertebrates including auxins vitamins steroids and carotenoids The book considers plant growth hormones hormone like substances in fungi and hormones in insects and crustaceans This volume is organized into four chapters and begins with a historical overview of the concept of hormones in plants and then describes assay methods for auxins along with auxin chemistry transport and role in tropisms The discussion moves to other plant hormones such as wound hormones flower forming hormones vitamins steroids carotenoids rhizocaline and caulocaline The book then methodically explains insect hormones and their sources the role of hormones in reproduction and postembryonic development and hormone induced color change in insects This volume also offers information on the mode of action and physicochemical properties of insect hormones The book concludes with a chapter on the biological effects of hormones on Crustacea from sex characteristics to color change molting and growth retinal pigment movements locomotion and ovarian development This book will be of interest to biologists zoologists botanists and endocrinologists

Phytohormones: A Window to Metabolism, Signaling and Biotechnological Applications Lam-Son Tran,Sikander Pal,2014-04-01 Abiotic and biotic stresses adversely affect plant growth and productivity The phytohormones regulate key physiological events under normal and stressful conditions for plant development Accumulative research efforts have discovered important roles of phytohormones and their interactions in regulation of plant adaptation to numerous stressors Intensive molecular studies have elucidated various plant hormonal pathways each of which consist of many signaling components that link a specific hormone perception to the regulation of downstream genes Signal transduction pathways of auxin abscisic acid cytokinins gibberellins and ethylene have been thoroughly investigated More recently emerging signaling pathways of brassinosteroids jasmonates salicylic acid and strigolactones offer an exciting gateway for understanding their multiple roles in plant physiological processes At the molecular level phytohormonal crosstalks can be antagonistic or synergistic or additive in actions Additionally the signal transduction component s of one hormonal pathway may interplay with the signaling component s of other hormonal pathway s Together these and other research findings have revolutionized the concept of phytohormonal studies in plants Importantly genetic engineering now enables plant biologists to manipulate the signaling pathways of plant hormones for development of crop varieties with improved yield and stress tolerance This book written by internationally recognized scholars from various countries represents the state of the art understanding of plant hormones biology signal transduction and implications Aimed at a wide range of readers including researchers students teachers and many others who have interests in this flourishing research field every section is concluded with biotechnological strategies to modulate hormone contents or signal transduction pathways and crosstalk that enable us to develop crops in a sustainable manner Given the important physiological implications of plant hormones in stressful environments our book is finalized with chapters on phytohormonal crosstalks under abiotic and biotic stresses
