Statistical inference uses 2 different ways to summarize data. It either begins with a very broad focus, just using properties of the entire population (e.g. the average of the entire population of students). Or, it begins by focusing on the statistical issue and then on a population of study (e.g. students). But either way, the population of study is well-defined and statistical inference addresses that and the question of the sample population regarding themselves, and what effect does the population have on the inference.
