Structured Population Models in Biology and Epidemiology Pierre Magal, Shigui Ruan, 2008-04-12 In this new century mankind faces ever more challenging environmental and public health problems such as pollution invasion by exotic species the emergence of new diseases or the emergence of diseases into new regions West Nile virus SARS Anthrax etc and the resurgence of existing diseases in uenza malaria TB HIV AIDS etc Mathematical models have been successfully used to study many biological epidemiological and medical problems and nonlinear and complex dynamics have been observed in all of those contexts Mathematical studies have helped us not only to better understand these problems but also to find solutions in some cases such as the prediction and control of SARS outbreaks understanding HIV infection and the investigation of antibiotic resistant infections in hospitals

Structured population models distinguish individuals from one another according to characteristics such as age size location status and movement to determine the birth growth and death rates interaction with each other and with environment infectivity etc The goal of structured population models is to understand how these characteristics affect the dynamics of these models and thus the outcomes and consequences of the biological and epidemiological processes There is a very large and growing body of literature on these topics This book deals with the recent and important advances in the study of structured population models in biology and epidemiology There are six chapters in this book written by leading researchers in these areas
