Abstract: This paper examines the effects of a change in the way that the U.S. government collects and reports its trade data. The data are collected from the U.S. Census Bureau's monthly trade reports. The data are used to calculate the trade share of GDP. The results show that the trade share of GDP has increased over the last decade. This is due to a combination of factors, including a decline in the share of GDP accounted for by the government and a decline in the share of GDP accounted for by the non-trading sector.
