Cyberspace Odyssey Jos de Mul, 2010-04-16 The emergence of the hominids more than five million years ago marked the start of the human odyssey through space and time. This book deals with the last stage of this fascinating journey: the exploration of cyberspace and cybertime. Through the rapid global implementation of information and communication technologies, a new realm for human experience and imagination has been disclosed. Conversely, these postgeographical and posthistorical technologies have started to colonize our bodies and minds. Taking Homer's Odyssey and Kubrick's 2001 A Space Odyssey as his starting point, the author investigates the informatization of the worldview, focusing on its implications for our culture, arts, religion, and science, and ultimately our form of life. Moving across a wide range of disciplines, varying from philosophical anthropology and palaeontology to information theory and from astrophysics to literary film and new media studies, the author discusses our cyberspace odyssey from a reflective position beyond euphoria and nostalgia. His analysis is as profound as nuanced and deals with issues that will be high on the agenda for many decades to come. In 2003, a Dutch Edition of Cyberspace Odyssey received the Socrates Prize for the best philosophy book published in Dutch.

Does Mere Connection Lead to Social Interaction in Online Social Networks? An Empirical Investigation on Flickr.Com Xinlei Chen, Xiaohua Zeng, Yuxin Chen, 2014 Online social networks such as Twitter and Facebook have become increasingly popular An interesting question is whether once people become friends in these online social networks they really influence each other Although a stream of research has studied the social interaction effect many of these studies employ a between subjects design which complicates the identification of the effect We address the question using a within subjects design and a unique data set from Flickr com thereby reducing the identification challenge Specifically we examine whether people's photo marking decisions are influenced by their friends Our findings reveal that friends do influence one another though the influence is asymmetric while an individual is more likely to mark a photo if her friends do so she is much less affected if her friends take no action We rule out one alternative explanation that this effect is driven by the influence of common friends We show that the social interaction is enhanced by users' offline closeness measured by whether they live in the same country but not affected by their characteristics in the social network We also demonstrate the robustness of our findings against several assumptions made in the paper Individual Retweeting Behavior on Social Networking Sites Juan Shi, Kin Keung Lai, Gang Chen, 2020-09-19 This book explores and analyzes influential predictors and the underlying mechanisms of individual content sharing retweeting behavior on social networking sites SNS from an empirical perspective Since Individual content sharing retweeting behavior expedites information dissemination it is a critical mechanism of information diffusion on Twitter Individual sharing retweeting behavior does not appear to happen randomly So what factors lead to individual information dissemination behavior What are the dominating predictors How does the recipient make retweeting decisions How do these influential predictors combine and by what mechanism do they influence an individual's retweeting decisions Furthermore are there any differences in the process of individual retweeting decisions If so what causes such differences In order to answer these previously unexplored questions and gain a holistic view of individual retweeting behavior the authors examined people's retweeting history on Twitter and obtained a real dataset containing more than 60 million Twitter posts They then employed text mining and natural language processing techniques to extract useful information from social media content and used various feature selection methods to identify a subset of salient features that have substantial effects on individual retweeting behavior Lastly they applied the Elaboration Likelihood Model to build an overarching theoretical framework to reveal the underlying mechanisms of individual retweeting behavior Given its scope this book will appeal to researchers interested in investigating information dissemination on social media as well as to marketers and administrators who plan to use social networking sites as an important avenue for information dissemination Living in the Digital Age Pawel Bilinski, 2019 This study examines the usefulness of Twitter YouTube and Instagram in corporate communication We document that Twitter communication helps investors interpret earnings news and associates with stronger price reactions to earnings announcements YouTube videos and Instagram pictures have either negative or no effect on investors' ability to understand earnings information Further firms that post on the three social platforms experience positive price reactions to earnings announcements regardless of the news content which suggests that investors perceive social media communication to signal higher disclosure effort The effects we document dominate in stocks with high retail ownership and are robust to endogeneity bias Our results suggest not all social media platforms help investors interpret earnings news though social media communication plays an important signalling role Twitter, the Public Sphere, and the Chaos of Online Deliberation Gwen Bouvier, Judith E. Rosenbaum, 2020-07-29 This volume provides a critical view of the nature and quality of political and civic communication on Twitter The introduction lays out the current state of research showing the continuum of views from the more optimistic to more pessimistic regarding the platform's potential to facilitate civic conversations The eleven empirical case studies in the book provide new insights addressing a variety of topics through a diverse array of methodological approaches Together the chapters provide a counter position to recent studies that offer more celebratory assessments of Twitter's potential The book draws attention to the chaotic insular uncivil and emotionally charged nature of debate and communication on Twitter

Social Networks that Matter Bernardo A. Huberman, Daniel M. Romero, Fang Wu, 2013 Scholars advertisers and political activists see massive online social networks as a representation of social interactions that can be used to study the propagation of ideas social bond dynamics and viral marketing among others But the linked structures of social networks do not reveal actual interactions among people Scarcity of attention and the daily rhythms of life and work makes people default to interacting with those few that matter and that reciprocate their attention A study of social interactions within Twitter reveals that the driver of usage is a sparse and hidden network of connections underlying the declared set of friends and followers

Extracting Health-related Social Structures from Conversations in Twitter Abduljaleel Al-Rubaye, 2016 Online Social Networks e.g. Twitter and Facebook have dramatically grown in usage and become popular in recent years In addition to keeping track of friends and acquaintances these networks provide a powerful means of exchanging and sharing information on many different topics of interest e.g. sports religion politics health concerns etc Moreover the use of these networks has introduced a completely new way of collaboration among people virtually creating spheres of friends who generally feel comfortable discussing a variety of subjects and even helping each other to grow in knowledge about certain subjects Therefore people have been attracted to becoming a part of these spheres In this thesis we build and analyze networks of social groups on Twitter related to the topic of certain diseases We considered 13 health conditions that are categorized as the top leading causes of death in the United States and tracked any message that mentioned at least one of these health conditions To define a relation between Twitter users and create a network we used the concept of time window where the focus is on a particular period of time In the process of reconstructing social structures related to each one of the health conditions we assigned different lengths to a time window The argument was that social connectivity might be retrieved even in cases where users are not directly talking to each other However by analyzing and evaluating our networks based on three basic characteristics of social networks degree distribution average path length and clustering coefficient we found that the networks we extracted do not have all the characteristics of typical social networks and only 1% of them have the scale free characteristics yet some do which leads us to argue that our approach should be further investigated

A Guide to Social Media, 2015 Social Media Lightning Guides, 2015-06-10 Social Media Facebook Twitter and the Modern Revolution explores the myriad ways in which social media has influenced created and exposed some of the 21st century's most pivotal moments From the early days of social networking to the Arab Spring and its winter the idea of the technoself and the ways that technology has helped both individuals and groups shape their own identities to the issues of privacy and permanency in a digital world Social Media evaluates everything from Twitter fails to the Occupy movement and how the evolution of social media has impacted the evolution of society

Social Media as an Innovation - The Case of Twitter Andrew B. Whinston, Huaxia Rui, 2014 Social media services such as Twitter and YouTube are offering unprecedented opportunities for ordinary people to access a huge amount of content and to publish their own content for a global audience The key innovation of these services however is not technological rather it's about recognizing and connecting people's need for information and attention To better understand this we model a social media environment as an economy where consumption of content means supply of attention and consumption of attention is through supply of content Both the supply of content and the supply of attention involve investment of time hence time is money in this economy We show that as the population in this economy grows large there exists an attention wage for content production and the segmentation of the population is neatly characterized Surprisingly if users utility functions satisfy a certain linearity condition and the population size is large enough then with probability 1 users will self select into either the group of content producers or the group of content consumers resulting in a perfect division of labor Moreover the macro level content consumption and production of such partition equilibrium is stable suggesting the sustainability of the social media Based on our model and a massive collection of data from Twitter we propose and test four hypotheses and the statistical results give strong support to our theory This paper gives important insights into the unique innovation of recent social media services like Twitter and YouTube It also provides a new perspective on the free riding phenomenon in many large social media sites

The Effect of Social Media on Crowdsourcing Investigation Kaeun Ji, 2015 In this thesis I present a different way of viewing how social media affects crowdsourcing investigations I explored the Boston Marathon Bombing case and analyzed tweets that were collected during the crisis I focused on the key participants the national media the police and Twitter to explain how important it is for them to understand the role of social media in order to prevent reporting false information. From the data I indicated that there is a lack of understanding by the national media and the police to use social media as an investigation tool. This demonstrates that although social media has a high potential to be a useful tool in investigating, it will only create controversy if not used correctly. This research suggests that there should be precaution when using social media in future investigations to prevent mistakes.
