Overcoming Students' Misconceptions in Science Mageswary Karpudewan, Ahmad Nurulazam Md Zain, A.L. Chandrasegaran, 2017-02-28 This book discusses the importance of identifying and addressing misconceptions for the successful teaching and learning of science across all levels of science education from elementary school to high school It suggests teaching approaches based on research data to address students common misconceptions Detailed descriptions of how these instructional approaches can be incorporated into teaching and learning science are also included The science education literature extensively documents the findings of studies about students misconceptions or alternative conceptions about various science concepts Furthermore some of the studies involve systematic approaches to not only creating but also implementing instructional programs to reduce the incidence of these misconceptions among high school science students These studies however are largely unavailable to classroom practitioners partly because they are usually found in various science education journals that teachers have no time to refer to or are not readily available to them In response this book offers an essential and easily accessible guide Conceptual metaphor and embodied cognition in science learning Tamer Amin, Fredrik Jeppsson, Jesper Haglund, 2018-10-03 Scientific concepts are abstract human constructions invented to make sense of complex natural phenomena Scientists use specialised languages diagrams and mathematical representations of various kinds to convey these abstract constructions This book uses the perspectives of embodied cognition and conceptual metaphor to explore how learners make sense of these concepts That is it is assumed that human cognition including scientific cognition is grounded in the body and in the material and social contexts in which it is embedded Understanding abstract concepts is therefore grounded via metaphor in knowledge derived from sensory and motor experiences arising from interaction with the physical world The volume consists of nine chapters that examine a number of intertwined themes how systematic metaphorical mappings are implicit in scientific language diagrams mathematical representations and the gestures used by scientists how scientific modelling relies fundamentally on metaphor and can be seen as a form of narrative cognition how implicit metaphors can be the sources of learner misconceptions how conceptual change and the acquisition of scientific expertise involve learning to coordinate the use of multiple implicit metaphors and how effective instruction can build on recognising the embodied nature of scientific cognition and the role of metaphor in scientific thought and learning The volume also includes three extended commentaries from leading researchers in the fields of cognitive linguistics the learning sciences and science education in which they reflect on theoretical methodological and pedagogical issues raised in the book This book was originally published as a special issue of the International Journal of Science Education mathematical issues were problematic every year In this study a unit about gas properties and gas laws was modified to include inquiry based teaching methods The research questions focused on how these changes affected student results on a traditional end of the unit test and on an alternative assessment Students attitudes during these lessons were also monitored to see if the inquiry methods improved student perceptions of teaching learning and self awareness The results of this study showed that an inquiry approach improved the student s ability to perform on a traditional end of the unit test in the areas of microscopic understanding atomic level symbolic understanding mathematical level and graphical understanding relationships between pressure volume and temperature It was also shown to have a positive effect on the students confidence and attitude towards the material presented when inquiry was utilized On the other hand the revised unit did not improve the students overall performance on an alternative assessment geared towards the concept of pressure but showed some improvement in two specific areas a students understanding that pressure is created by molecules and their movement and b students understanding that when pressure is equalized little happens within a system
