The nervous system is made up of the brain, spinal cord, and nerves. The brain is the control center of the body. It receives information from the senses and sends out instructions to the rest of the body. The spinal cord is a long, thin, tube-like structure that runs down the back. It carries messages between the brain and the rest of the body. Nerves are bundles of fibers that carry messages between the brain, spinal cord, and the rest of the body.

The brain is divided into two main parts: the cerebrum and the cerebellum. The cerebrum is the largest part of the brain and is responsible for most of the body's functions. The cerebellum is smaller and is located at the back of the brain. It is responsible for coordination and balance. The brain also has a third part called the brainstem, which is located between the cerebrum and the cerebellum. It is responsible for basic functions like breathing and heart rate.
