

CHAPTER #9 CONTINUED

Neurons

process electrical excitability (the ability to respond to a stimulus + convert it into an action potential) any change in the environment that is strong enough to initiate initiates an electrical signal that travels along the surface of the membrane of a neurite (nerve fiber)

Parts of a Neuron

axon - conducts nerve impulses toward another neuron, muscle, cell or gland cell dendrites - receiving or input parts of a neuron cell body or soma, contains nucleus surrounded by cytoplasm that includes typical organelles axon hillock - thick base of cell body ganglion - collection of neuron cell bodies nucleus - clusters of cell bodies found in CNS nerve - bundles of axons

Classification of Neurons

classified according to the number of processes extending from cell body

Unipolar Neuron
few dendrites + one axon both dendrites + axon branches from single cell body

Bipolar Neuron
one main dendrite + one axon

Multipolar Neuron
usually have several dendrites + one axon

Functional Classifications

classified according to the direction in which the nerve impulse (action potential) travels with respect to the CNS

Sensory (afferent) neurons - either contain sensory receptors at their distal ends (dendrites) or are located just after sensory receptors that are separate cells

Sensory neuron forms an action potential in its axon + the action potential is conveyed into the CNS through cranial or spinal nerves... impulse is processed

Motor (efferent) neurons - convey action potentials away from the CNS to effectors (muscles + glands) in the PNS through cranial or spinal nerves

Interneurons (association) neurons - located within CNS between sensory + motor neurons. Process incoming sensory info + direct motor response
