

Choosing a Humidifier

Ultrasonic: Most popular type of humidifier. They are quiet, compact, and easy to clean. They use a high-frequency sound to create a fine mist. They are usually the most affordable option.

Evaporative: These humidifiers use a wick and a fan to evaporate water into the air. They are often the most effective for allergies and asthma. They are also quieter than ultrasonic models.

Impeller: These humidifiers use a rotating disk to throw water into the air, creating a fine mist. They are usually the most affordable, but they can be noisy and the mist can be quite coarse.

Steam: These humidifiers boil water to create steam. They are the most effective for colds and flu, but they are also the most expensive and can be noisy.
