

Introduction

It seems that there are at least two opposite points of view toward art, if not more. But before I go any farther, let me say that I don't think one is right and the other is wrong. They are different and for the artist they each have their use and value. Simply put, the two points of view are, on the one side, "Art is the imitation of nature," and on the other, "Art is based on a concept of the ideal."

"Art is the imitation of nature or Art is based on a concept of the ideal."

In the 1500's Raphael stated, "There are two principles of ideal art: the choice of the most beautiful and perfect proportions of models, and a purely abstract idea which has no reference to reality." In May of 1664, Gian Pietro Bellori, the classicist, delivered a talk at the Academy of San Luca in Rome where he affirmed that the choice of natural beauties, which was keenly made by the artist, is superior to nature itself. Raphael, "the great master of those who know," is cited together with Bramante, Perugino, Giulio Romano, and Michelangelo for their efforts to bring architecture back to "the elegant forms of ancient buildings." At the same time there were complaints about the artists who were "abandoning the study of nature and had spoiled art with a style leaning more on practice and pure invention than on imitation of nature." This is the same argument that went on at the beginning of the twentieth century when the modernists art movements rejected the work of the salons in favor of the basic abstract elements of art.

In general, art education is still split along these two basic lines of thought. On the one hand, we have the prevailing approach to learning drawing by using long poses where the student learns to copy the model. Today we call this the illustrative or academic approach. On the other hand, we have a purely conceptual approach where the concept is the overriding element in the drawing. Now what has this to do with teaching drawing for animation? A lot! I feel that drawing, as it is practiced in the animation industry today, most approximates classical drawing in the tradition of Raphael, DaVinci, Pontormo, and other great draftsman of the past. The drawings of the past were used primarily in planned stages toward the creation of paintings, sculptures, and murals. As such, they were practical pragmatic steps in representing ideas. The classical approach of constructing
