The course of the American Revolution

The revolution began with a bang – literally! In 1775, the first shots were fired at the battles of Lexington and Concord in Massachusetts. The colonists, who were now calling themselves “Patriots,” were fighting against the British soldiers, known as “Redcoats.”

In the following year, 1776, the Patriots made a big decision. They decided that they no longer wanted to be part of Britain. Leaders from each of the 13 colonies met in a group called the Continental Congress. Here, they wrote the Declaration of Independence, announcing they were now the United States of America. This document was signed on July 4, which is why we celebrate Independence Day!

The war continued with many battles. One of the most famous ones was the Battle of Saratoga in 1777. The Patriots won this battle, and it was a turning point. Why? Because after this victory, France decided to help the Patriots against the British. This was a big help to the American cause.

However, things were not easy for the Patriots. They faced many hardships, especially during the harsh winter at Valley Forge in 1777-1778. Even though it was tough, they kept going. They believed in their cause and wanted to be free from British rule.

Finally, in 1781, the last major battle of the revolution took place at Yorktown, Virginia. The Patriots, with the help of the French, surrounded the British and forced them to surrender. This was a huge victory!

Two years later, in 1783, the war officially ended with the Treaty of Paris. The British recognized the United States as a new, independent country. After many years of struggle and sacrifice, the Patriots had won their freedom. The course of the American Revolution shows us how determination and belief in a cause can lead to great changes.
