The History of the Atom Webquest

You are responsible for completing the History of the Atom worksheet. EACH PERSON must complete their own copy. Use the internet to find information.

Have you ever wondered how scientists have figured out so much about these particles that we can't even see?

In a way, the scientists who have unraveled the properties of the atom have been like detectives solving parts of a mystery with new mysteries arising out of every discovery.

In this web quest, you are going to find out how our modern view of the atom has developed throughout history by looking at the four most important discoveries. Answer the questions throughout the webquest and then you should be able to use those answers to fill in your worksheet.

You may use any resource you wish to help you answer the questions in this web quest (you can find lot's of stuff if you want to search the web). Some useful links have been provided for each scientist.

Democritus & Aristotle (~400 B.C.E.)

Democritus was the first person (that we know of) to teach the idea that there are tiny fundamental particles from which all matter is made. Unfortunately, Aristotle didn't share his view and, since Aristotle was so highly respected, his views were accepted for nearly 2000 years.

Democritus through Dalton http://www.visionlearning.com/library/module_viewer.php?mid=49

1. What 4 elements did people at this time believe that all matter is made up of?

Aristotle believed the 4 elements were earth, fire, air, and water. This was believed by most of the public, and Democritus's ideas were disregarded.

2. What did Democritus call the tiny fundamental particles of matter?

They called them "atomos", which is where we get the modern word "atom".
